

The American Board of Laser Surgery, Inc. Privacy Policy

The ABLS will not share information about any member, including that maintained on file relative to his/her certification process, with other Diplomates or members of the ABLS, or persons outside of the organization, without that member's consent, except as noted herein. The ABLS will not sell or make available its members' information for any commercial purposes. The ABLS reserves the right to provide information about any individual candidate for certification to either a Board Officer and/or a Diplomat-Examiner for the purpose of reviewing that candidate's application for certification, and/or information necessary for evaluation of that candidate for certification. The ABLS also reserves the right to maintain a list of its members on its website that will include name, medical designation (M.D., D.O., etc.) at the time of certification, the certificate number and year of certification. Should the ABLS develop a more extensive Diplomates or member's area on its website, Diplomates or members will only opt-in by consent. If the ABLS is asked by an outside source if a Diplomat does hold the ABLS certificate, the ABLS will confirm if it is so, the specialty designated, the certificate number, and year of certification. For further questions, please email us at lasers1060@aol.com.

ABLS Disclaimer of Liability

ABLS Certificates are awarded to medical practitioners who have been accepted for the certification process, and passed the ABLS's Written and Oral Examinations, according to the ABLS standards. These examinations are designed to solely promote the understanding of fundamental laser science, light-tissue interaction, and laser safety in medicine and surgery. The Written Examinations are scored quantitatively with a minimum passing grade of 75.0% to 80.0%, depending on the specific examination. The Oral Examination is a pass-fail evaluation based on review of a variety of information and references gathered from candidates in advance of the examination, and information obtained during the examination itself. The information is evaluated "as is" provided to the ABLS, with additional review and confirmation at the Board's discretion, and based upon the evaluation of the candidate.

The ABLS will make no guarantees of, nor assume any liability for, the actions of any Diplomates or members in their practice of medicine as the result of earning the ABLS certificate. The certificate in and of itself does not guarantee the efficacy nor safe practice of any medical practitioners in the use of lasers, and the Board makes no guarantee of efficacy of any mode of practice or procedure on the part of its Diplomates or members. These practitioners are not in any way under the ongoing supervision of the Board. The use of any knowledge gained from the ABLS certification process by ABLS Diplomates or members in their treatment of their patients is entirely within the control of those medical practitioners, and not the ABLS.

Information from the Board's website, study materials and Written and Oral Examinations is not intended nor should be construed as specific medical advice or recommendations for specific patients. It is not intended to be a substitute for patient consultation and physical examination relative to selecting treatment for conditions which may benefit from the use of laser and light modalities.

The Board attempts to provide educational information that is accurate, however any of this information is provided "as is" and is subject to change from time to time without notice. The Board, including its officers, directors, employees and any associated contractual service providers, makes no specific medical or legal guaranties relative to the use of this information, which is entirely up to the decision making of any medical practitioner, or other person, who receives the Board's Certificate, or has access to the Board's information. The Board is not responsible for the actions by any medical practitioner, or other persons, resulting from the use of the Board's information, nor assumes any liability for same.

ABLS Website Disclaimer

Any information, views, and opinions provided on the ABLS website directly by any Board members and/or Diplomates are those of those members and/or Diplomates and do not necessarily reflect the views and opinions of the ABLS. This includes any testimonials, written or video. Any information provided by our members is not independently verified by the ABLS.

The ABLS, and including its directors, officers, employees, and service contractors, will not be responsible for any information found on any linked web sites or their associated links. Any links are provided for the convenience of the reader and not as an endorsement of their contents by the Board.

Guidelines and Terms of Use for the ABLS Name and Logo

The ABLS defines marketing by medical practitioners as any form of communication (printed or broadcast media, and on websites and the Internet) that is designed to inform or attract patients, or prospective patients, about the availability of products or services. The ABLS always encourages marketing in a truthful manner that complies with any and all applicable regulations, and professional guidelines, for marketing/advertising by medical practitioners. The following are the guidelines and terms of use for the ABLS name and logo. Any ABLS Diplomates or members who do not adhere to these may be subject to review and sanctions by the Board of Directors.

- All ABLS Diplomates or members who hold the ABLS certificate may refer to their certification by the ABLS in their communications and marketing in a professional manner, as they would typically be required to refer to certifications by other medical specialty boards, or memberships in other medical societies. The name may be referred to as the "ABLS"; the "A.B.L.S."; or "The American Board of Laser Surgery" (with or without a "The"). The status may be referred to or conveyed as "certified by", "certificate holder of", "Diplomate of", "member of", or other similar designation that accurately conveys the proper status as a bonafide Diplomate or member, and certificate holder, of the ABLS. This also may be governed by, and should comply with, any country, state/province, or local regulations for practitioner advertising.
- The ABLS logo is not available for general use, either as shown on the Board's letterhead, website or other communications or materials, without the express written permission of the ABLS.
- All advertising and promotional activities by ABLS Diplomates or members, in conjunction with mention of their ABLS certification, must be both ethical and in accordance with generally accepted professional guidelines and governing statutes, and not misrepresent the integrity of the ABLS or its certification process.

ABLS Copyrighted Information and Materials

All information contained within the Board's web site, and in its proprietary Study Guide, and its Written and Oral Examinations, are the intellectual and copyrighted property of the Board. Any reproduction, redistribution, transmission or modification of this information for any purpose whatsoever is strictly prohibited without the express written consent of the Board.